THE BEST Photoplay Department in WASHINGTON

Photoplayers Should Carefully Pick a Play for Stage

In connection with the remarks that have been made in this column from time to time regarding the manner in which the stage and the screen can be brought into co-operaion, Washington had an unique demonstration of the interchangeable character of the work of the two branches of the acting profersion last week. Three of the local theaters were the scenes of these demonstrations. At one of them one of the greatest of the screen favorites, John Bunny, appeared in person, while at the other two wellknown stage stars were shown in pictures-Richard Bennett and Annette Kellerman. Of the three per-formances it is more than probable that the screen plays pleased the largest number of people. This was largely because the screen star who appeared at the other house did not appeared at the other house do not select the best sort of a medium for the exploitation of his personality, although so far as showing off many of his particular points of excellence was concerned, it served so far as the audience was concerned.

There is a growing demand among the people who are supporting the

the people who are supporting the moving pictures for an occasional view of the actors and actresses who have become favorites, in per-zon. Practically all of the screen stars have been asked to appear at benefits or in vaudeville from time to time, but the contracts that most to time, but the contracts that most of them have, not contemplating such a thing, are interpreted to prohibit them. The idea of the older type of producer was to keep down the personality of the actor and actress as much as possible and put forward only the producing concern's name. The last few years has proved this policy to be bad. The personality of the actor and actress has come to mean everything to the success of the pictures and the producing company very little. Of course, some companies have put out such uniformly good pictures or pictures of such a character that the name of the concern has been a guarantee as to photography and production—but even with these companies it has been found that certain actors and actresses will draw larger audiences than others. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the advantage of the producting company to permit the players duction once or twice a season, and tour with this so that all of the peothem have, not contemplating once or twice a season, and tour with this so that all of the peo-ple who are paying money for the support of the pictures can have a chance to see the actors and ac-tresses as they really are. There are indications this will shortly be done by some of the companies. One of the most popular stars on the screen told us recently that he in-tended to demand the insertion of a clause in his next contract that would permit him to accept some of the many offers he has made for yaudeville. This actor declares that can almost double his salary if he is permitted to make a couple of tours a year with a stage show and that his popularity will be increased a hundred fold. That he is right his conclusions has been proven by the number of people who throng the exhibitors' balls and other places where actors appear as invited

The selection of a medium for the The selection of a medium for the exposition of the actor or actress should be given the most careful at tention, however. It would not do for the actor to depart from the character of work he has been doing on the screen. We mean by this that an actor who had played romanic drama should not try low comedy or song and dance work. There are many of the leading stars who are good song and dance people. But it would hurt their work on the screen, hurt their popularity with the people who want to see them, for them to exhibit their talent in this direction.

It would seem that the best plan for the actor would be to secure a sketch or something of the sort that whetch or something of the sort that would give him an opportunity to do the same class of work he has been doing on the screen—the same general class, that is. If it was found possible for him to secure the services of some of the members of the company with whom he is accustomed to play, it would be well for him to put on a regular playette, with some of the scenes in moving pictures and some of them in spoken play. The popular star to whom we referred has evolved this idea, and it is not improbable that before the end of this season he will be seen on tour with a company of his fellow-players in just such a production.

Embarrassing Situation.

A story which a great favorite in the British house of commons tells concerns a painfully embarrossing situation, in which Sydney Buxton once found himself. It appears that Mr. Buxton one day got to a railway station five minutes before the train arrived, and sat down on a bank of earth to wait. When he got into a compariment he found his cost and weistcoat full of ants, so he took them off and shook them. Shortly after he felt the ants inside his trousers, so he took them off, and was shaking them out of the window, when a passing train took the trousers out of his hand. This was very awkward. He was going to a cabinet council, and he had on a frock coat, but no trousers. At the next stopping place he called to a porter, "I have had the misfortune to throw my trousers out of the window." That won't do," said the porter and he shouted to the guard. "Here's bloke in the first class without any
